

Top Reagan Aide To Resign Post

Capitol News Service
 SACRAMENTO — Philip M. Battaglia has announced he will quit his job as No. 1 man to Governor Ronald Reagan, as executive secretary, but it was not quite certain whether the move was a resignation or a promotion.
 There was considerable speculation, and Battaglia did little to dispel it, that his new role would be one of a free-swinging national campaign manager for Governor Reagan for the Republican nomination for President.
 As such, Battaglia will be following two key members of the staff who left previously. Tom Reed, who stayed in the organization long enough to superintend the selection of almost all of Reagan's appointees, now works for the Republican state central committee and one of his main tasks is lining up speaking engagements for the governor in the east.

 Dirk Eldredge, who was Battaglia's chief assistant, also is working in party matters.
BATTAGLIA, 32, was Reagan's chief campaign mentor in his successful race last year. While he had never mentioned it before, Battaglia said he was operating on a one-year leave of absence from his law firm, Flint & McKay of Los Angeles. However, Battaglia said he was not certain that he would rejoin the same law firm as he had received a number of other offers.

 The resignation is tagged to the end of the legislative session this month. It is provided for, at a five-day length, to give the legislature the opportunity to consider governor's vetoes.
 William Clark Jr., who has been cabinet secretary to Reagan, will move up to take Battaglia's spot as executive secretary. The move will be worth $4,000 a year to Clark—the cabinet secretary position pays $20,000; the executive secretary slot, $24,000.

Battaglia, in answer to a question as to the reception of Reagan or his aides in Washington said the difference between January and June has been "startling." But the outgoing executive secretary emphasized that, if anyone took his resignation as an indication that a national organization was being put together for Reagan, they would be mistaken.
 "I had never made up my mind that this would be my profession," Battaglia said. "Law is my profession."
 Battaglia was asked if he would be able to travel in his new job in private enterprise, and his answer was that he would. He was asked if such travel would have been possible as executive secretary. "No, it wouldn't be," Battaglia said. "The job ties you down. The work stacks up in the office."
